Note: Survivors had fought for reparations, meaning compensation, for damages done during the Tulsa Race Massacre. In the photo they are making a demonstration in support of reparations in front of the U.S. Supreme Court. The images show them holding papers important to their court case. Eddie Faye Gates, an advocate, holds her book Riot on Greenwood, which contains the oral histories of survivors.

1. Scan the photo, what do you notice about the people, objects, and activities?
2. The survivors of the Tulsa Race Massacre fought for reparations. How was this action a sign of the resilience of the Greenwood Community?
